

Martin Voelker
m.voelker@cres-energy.org

Martin is chair of the Jeffco chapter of the Colorado Renewable Energy (CRES) and serves on the state board. He is also a co-founding board member of NECO, New Energy Colorado, and a former board member of the climate activist organization 350Colorado.org. As a videographer he mostly films events and conferences. Prior to working in the climate and renewables space he worked as department administrator at Tufts University, was a public affairs radio producer and host, worked as a cameraman and sound guy for environmental documentaries, and as a newspaper and science reporter. He studied Psychology, Biology, Anthropology and Philosophy in Konstanz, Wuerzburg, and Boston. He lives in Golden with his wife, a chemistry professor at the Colorado School of Mines.